"The Last Bastion for Critically Ill Patients"

Sometimes referred to as the "last bastion" intensive care treats critically ill patients in the hospital. In the intensive care, we provide 24-hour treatment for critically ill patients brought in by ambulance, those experiencing sudden deterioration of health during hospitalization, and patients who have undergone major surgeries. Our focus is on their treatment, recovery, and support.

Teamwork is crucial in intensive care, involving collaboration among specialists from different medical fields, nurses, clinical engineers, physical therapists, pharmacists, dietitians, and more.

This collaboration is led by a coordinating physician known as an intensivist.

While saving lives is undoubtedly our top priority, that alone is not our sole objective. We are dedicated to providing treatment that not only preserves life but also enables individuals to enjoy a fuller quality of life.

We help guide patients to walk a life journey true to themselves, fostering quality of life beyond mere survival. We believe that intensive care serves as a new starting point in a patient's life journey.
