

Yen Ta Huang, MD, MSc, PhD. Huang is the current director of Taiwan Society of Emergency & Critical Care Medicine (TSECCM). Now he is working as attending physician at Surgical Intensive Unit of National Cheng Kung University Hospital, Tainan, Taiwan.

He earned his M.D. degree from National Taiwan University (2000). Afterward, he completed his residency training at Hualien Tzu Chi Medical Center, and got the Board of Internal Medicine (2003) and Emergency Medicine (2005). He was the attending physician of Department of Emergency Medicine, Medical Intensive Care Unit, Surgical Intensive Care Unit, and Division of Experimental Surgery of Hualien Tzu Chi Medical Center, Hualien, Taiwan.

He obtained his master (2006) and PhD degree (2011) from Institute of Pharmacology and Toxicology at Tzu Chi University, and was the associate professor in Department of Pharmacology of Tzu Chi University, Hualien, Taiwan. He had studied abroad as the visiting scholar in Department of Emergency & Care Medicine of Nagoya University (November 2014~May 2015), Nagoya, Japan.

Dr. Huang not only specializes in pre-clinical investigation but also clinical studies, especially the field of evidence-based medicine. He was the head consultant of Taiwan Consensus of Acute Kidney Injury 2020. He is a famous speaker in emergency and critical care medicine in Taiwan, especially in the field of sepsis, resuscitation, hemodynamics, acute kidney injury, clinical pharmacology, and critical appraisal of evidences.